STATEMENT OF JURISDICTION

This is an appeal of right from a final order dated February 28, 2018 (ATTACHMENT A) approving and modifying an earlier “Proposed Referee’s Order and Notice of Submission” (ATTACHMENT B, Proposed Order) issued by the Eaton County Friend of the Court on September 20, 2017, which recommended including Appellant’s veterans’ disability pay as income in calculation of his child support obligations. The September 20, 2017 Proposed Order explained the procedures for filing objections and having such objections heard by the Circuit Court. Objections were timely filed, and briefs were submitted pursuant to MCR 3.215(E)(5) and MCR 2.119(C). Pursuant to the procedures established under MCR 3.215(E)(5), as adopted by the Eaton County Circuit Court, the matter was set for a hearing.

On January 24, 2018, the Circuit Court entered a Uniform Child Support Order adopting the Referee’s proposals. Plaintiff / Appellant (hereafter referred to as Appellant, unless otherwise specified) timely filed a motion objecting to the entry of the proposed orders of the Circuit Court. The Circuit Court next addressed Appellant’s substantive arguments in a hearing held on February 28, 2018 (ATTACHMENT C, Hearing Transcript, 2/28/2018).

The Circuit Court’s February 28, 2018 Order approved the Referee’s Proposed Order, which recommended certain conclusions of fact and rulings concerning Appellant’s family support obligations and whether he was required to include, as part of his disposable income for these purposes, certain veteran’s disability benefits that he receives from the Department of Veterans Affairs pursuant to and by authority of federal law. The Circuit Court ruled, inter alia:

- 1) Plaintiff’s / Appellant’s Motion to Set Aside the September 20, 2017 Proposed Order of the Referee is denied for the reasons stated on the record at the February 28, 2018 hearing;
- 2) The Circuit Court’s Uniform Child Support Order dated January 23, 2018, is hereby fully effective and immediately enforceable, the reservation in paragraph 13 of said order having been removed by the Circuit Court’s February 28, 2018 hearing;

- 3) Defendant / Appellee is awarded sanctions, including reasonable costs and attorneys fees against Plaintiff / Appellant and his attorney, jointly and severally, for the reasons stated by the Court on the record of February 28, 2018. (ATTACHMENT A, p. 2)

On March 21, 2018, Appellant timely filed a motion for reconsideration to the Circuit Court's February 28, 2018 Order. In the meantime, a judgment of sanctions was entered on April 20, 2018. On June 12, 2018, the Circuit Court entered an order denying Appellant's Motion for Reconsideration. (ATTACHMENT D, June 12, 2018 Order Denying Reconsideration).

On July 3, 2018, Appellant timely filed a Claim of Appeal from the Circuit Court's June 12, 2018 Order denying reconsideration of its substantive decision dated February 28, 2018. See MCR 7.202(6); MCR 7.203(A).

In addition, and as an alternate statement of jurisdiction, Appellant argues federal law preempts state law concerning the disposition of his federal benefits based on the precise classification of Appellant as a non-retiree recipient of veterans' disability benefits. See 10 USC 1408; 42 USC 659; and 38 USC 5301. Where federal law preempts state law, Michigan state courts lack subject matter jurisdiction and authority to enter an order that is contrary to such preemptive federal law. Henry v Laborers' Local 1191, 495 Mich 260, 287, n 82; 848 NW2d 130 (2014) (stating "preemption is a question of subject-matter jurisdiction"; "as such this Court must consider it"; and "preemption is a claim that the state court has not power to adjudicate the subject matter of the case".) Therefore, as a threshold matter, the reviewing court must consider whether subject matter jurisdiction was lacking in the lower court's ruling where it is contended that the ruling contravened preemptive federal law. Arbuckle v GM LLC, 499 Mich 521, 532; 885 NW2d 232 (2016).

Thus, under either of these two alternate statements of jurisdiction, this Court has jurisdiction over Appellant's appeal of right.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

The questions presented in relation to the material facts are as follows:

- I. Federal law (10 USC 1408; 42 USC 659(a), (h)(1)(A)(ii)(V), and (h)(1)(B)(iii); and 38 USC 5301) excludes veterans' disability benefits paid to a non-retiree recipient of veterans' disability pay from consideration for the payment of child support and spousal support, and jurisdictionally protects these funds from "any legal process" whatever.

Appellant falls within this category because he is a disabled veteran who is not eligible for retired pay, and who has therefore not waived military retired pay to receive his veterans' disability pay.

Did the trial court err in finding that it had jurisdiction and authority to order that these specific funds be used in calculating Appellant's support obligation and in ordering him to pay costs, attorneys fees and sanctions?

Appellant Answers: Yes.

Appellee Answers: No.

Trial Court Answers: No.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

A. Summary of Arguments

State courts have jurisdiction and authority to order veterans to use federal disability pay to pay child support and spousal support when, and only when, the veteran is also retired and has waived retirement pay to receive disability pay. See the Uniform Servicemembers Former Spouses Protection Act (USFSPA), 10 USC 1408(a)(4)(A)(ii); (d)(1); (e)(6) and the Child Support Enforcement Act (CSEA), 42 USC 659(a); (h)(1)(A)(ii)(V); (h)(1)(B)(iii). In all other cases, federal disability payments paid by the United States to veterans for disabilities incurred during military service are off limits, not assignable, and cannot be subject to any legal process whatever. See 38 USC 5301. These funds are expressly protected by federal law pursuant to Congress' Article I enumerated powers, as expressed in positive legislation passed pursuant thereto. Id. See also Howell v Howell, 581 US ___; 137 S Ct 1400, 1406; 197 L Ed 2d 781 (2017), citing Rose v Rose, 481 US 619, 630-634 and n 6; 107 S Ct 2029; 95 L Ed 2d 599 (1987) and 10 USC 1408(e)(6) and stating that state courts “remain[] free to take account of the contingency that some military retirement pay might be waived, or...take account of reductions in value when it calculates or recalculates the need for spousal support” in such cases.

In this case, Appellant did not retire and is not entitled to retirement pay. He therefore can under no circumstance waive such retirement pay to receive his disability pay. He is among those veterans who have incurred service related disabilities while serving on active duty without the time in service or longevity in their careers to ever qualify for military retirement pay. Therefore, he does not fit within the only federal exception that allows state courts to consider veterans' disability pay and thus, the trial court erred in concluding that he must use such pay to satisfy any state court orders of support and/or costs and attorneys fees.

As this unambiguous federal law preempts state law in this very specific instance, the state court's order, to the extent that it exceeded its authority in contravening that federal law, may be challenged at any time because as the Michigan Supreme Court has held on many occasions, where federal law preempts state law, the state courts lacks subject matter jurisdiction to enter a contravening order.

B. Relevant Facts and Procedural Background

Appellant initially challenged use of his veterans' disability benefits in the calculation of his child support obligation to his former spouse in response to a motion filed by Appellee to increase support payments. Both Appellant and Appellee filed briefs to present this issue to the Circuit Court.

Appellant's brief on this issue was initially filed on July 31, 2017. In that brief, Appellant explained that he is a combat veteran of the Iraq war. (Appellant's Trial Brief, 07/31/2017). He was honorably discharged as a private first class after three years of service. Id. at 1-2. He was discharged because he was injured and disabled as a result of his military service. Id. at 2. He has been classified as a 100 percent disabled veteran. Id. Appellant was not able to retire, nor will he ever be able to claim retirement pay from the military because he did not attain the qualifying years in service. Id. Appellant therefore does not receive monies as remuneration for any employment he held with the United States military; he receives no "disposable retired pay" under the USFSPA, 10 USC 1408. Id. Per 5 CFR 581.103(b)(13), only "disability retired pay" is subject to state child support and spousal support orders. (emphasis added). Subsection (c)(7) also specifies that monies subject to such orders include only "compensation for a service connected disability" where the "former member of the Armed Forces who is in receipt of retired or retainer pay if the former member has waived either the entire amount or a portion of the retired or retainer pay in order to receive such [disability] compensation.” Id., citing 5 CFR 581.103(c)(7) (emphasis added).

Appellant’s brief further explained that 42 USC 659(a); (h)(1)(A)(ii)(V) and (h)(1)(B)(iii) of the Child Support Enforcement Act (CSEA) statutorily codified the classification of Appellant’s specific type of disability benefits as being off limits to state court orders for child and/or spousal support. Id. at 2-3. In addition to not being eligible for retirement, Appellant explained he had never waived a portion of military retired pay in order to receive his service-connected VA disability benefits. Id. He further argued that his service-connected disability benefits were not based on his earnings and did not constitute retired pay or retainer pay. Id. Michigan only allows, as federal law requires, consideration of disposable income. Id. at 3. Appellant further argued that Rose v Rose, 481 US 619, 625; 17 S Ct 2029; 95 L Ed 2d 599 (1987), did not apply to his specific circumstances. Id. at 3-6.

Appellant further argued that 38 USC 5301 protected the specific disability benefits he receives. Id. at 7. Subsection (a)(1) of this provision states: “Payments of benefits due or to become due under any law administered by the Secretary shall not be assignable except to the extent specifically authorized by law, and such payments made to, or on account of, a beneficiary shall be exempt from taxation, shall be exempt from the claim of creditors, and shall not be liable to attachment, levy, or seizure by or under any legal or equitable process whatever, either before or after receipt by the beneficiary.” Id.

In a reply brief filed on August 7, 2017, Appellee argued that the statutes and regulations cited by Appellant did not apply to the circumstances of his case. Reply Brief, 08/07/2017, p. 2. Appellee did not address 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii). Appellee further argued that since Appellant was not required to waive retired pay to receive VA benefits, none of the case law cited in support of Appellant's position applied. Id. Appellee argued that Rose v Rose, 481 US 619, 625; 17 S Ct 2029; 95 L Ed 2d 599 (1987), applied and meant that Appellant's veterans disability pay could be considered in a state court support order. Id. at 3. Therefore, Appellee argued that the total amount of Appellant's veterans disability pay could be included as income for the purposes of the amount of child support under the state mandatory child support guidelines. Id.

Appellee also obliquely addressed, without citing the language of, 38 USC 5301 claiming that it did not protect Appellant's disability benefits. Id. at 4. In a conclusory statement, Appellee stated: "The [state] Court's ability to consider VA disability benefits as income is not compromised or called-into-question[sic] by any court decision, statute or regulation. Indeed, the U.S. Supreme Court has already so held in a case that is factually identical." Id. (no citations provided).

As it relates to Appellant's appeal, Appellee concludes with a statement of the issues, inter alia, the Circuit Court should address:

[W]hether the VA disability benefits received by Plaintiff since May 12, 2013 are includible in his income for purposes of calculating the child support guidelines during that period. The Michigan Child Support Guidelines expressly include these benefits as income. These guidelines are provisions are mandatory. The U.S. Supreme Court found all federal statutes and regulations relating to these benefits do not modify or affect the operation of the guidelines. [Id. at 4.]

On September 20, 2017, the Friend of the Court issued a "proposed" order. (ATTACHMENT

B), concluding:

1. The Veterans disability benefits received by Plaintiff father since May 12, 2013 are includable in his income for purposes of calculating Plaintiff father's child support obligation utilizing the Michigan Child Support Guidelines.
2. The calculation of Plaintiff father's child support obligation shall be based on the Veterans disability income received by Plaintiff father retroactive to May 12, 2013. The Referee specifically finds that Plaintiff father intentionally misrepresented and intentionally failed, refused and/or neglected to disclose the true nature of his income since that date. Moreover, the Referee believes Plaintiff father conceded to retroactive application of the correct amount of his income for purposes of the calculation of his child support obligation.

3. The correspondence provided by the Veteran's Administration detailing the amount of Veterans disability benefits received by Plaintiff father shall be used to determine the actual total income received from May 12, 2013 to the present for purposes of calculating Plaintiff father's child support obligation, utilizing the Michigan Child Support Guidelines.
4. The Uniform Child Support Order entered by the court shall include a determination of the appropriate amount of child support arrearages owed by Plaintiff father, and a schedule to repay the same.
5. To effect the award of sanctions against Plaintiff father pursuant to MCR 2.114, Counsel for Defendant mother shall prepare and submit a statement to Plaintiff and the Friend of the Court stating the amount of hours he has expended representing Defendant mother regarding this child support matter. The Referee shall then issue a separate proposed order regarding MCR 2.114 sanctions under the 21-day rule.¹

ATTACHMENT B, pp. 7-8.]

Appellant timely filed objections to this proposed order in accordance with the Michigan Court Rules and the matter was set for a hearing before the Circuit Court. That hearing was conducted on February 28, 2018. (ATTACHMENT C, Hearing Transcript, 02/28/2018). The Circuit Court addressed the substantive arguments being addressed in Appellant's Claim of Appeal.

Appellant's counsel stated that the question of law concerned whether the Eaton County Friend of the Court could take Appellant's VA benefits into consideration. Id. at p. 4, ll. 4-7. The Circuit Court asked whether veterans' administration benefits were covered by what state law allowed. Id., ll. 7-12. Appellant's counsel explained that there were "two types of veterans' benefits...the veterans' benefits that me, being a service member and being eligible for retirement pay – get injured while on duty – so I can waive my retirement pay and receive VA benefits in lieu of retirement...." Id., ll. 18-22. Appellant's counsel then tried to explain that Appellant's VA disability benefits were not such pay. Id. “Congress...has protected the veterans’ benefits that are received not in lieu of retirement but for the disability, strictly for the disability, 100 percent.” Id., p. 8, ll. 6-11.

Appellee’s counsel then countered by arguing that Rose v Rose, 481 US 619, 625; 17 S Ct 2029; 95 L Ed 2d 599 (1987) was the controlling case – “decided in 1987...that specifically held that veterans’ disability benefits not only are susceptible to child support, but that federal law that requires states to have child support guidelines require its inclusion.” Id., pp. 9-10. Appellee’s counsel argued that there was “no merit to the claim that these benefits are not susceptible to child support calculations, are not income for purposes of the child support guidelines in Michigan or any other state.” Id., p. 10, ll. 10-13.

The Circuit Court noted that it had not entered an order concerning the inclusion of the VA disability benefits, asking Appellee’s counsel: “So, the higher support’s not in place right now?” Id., p. 12, ll. 19-25.

The Circuit Court then turned back to Appellant’s counsel to engage on the very issue of the applicability of Rose, supra. “What about this Rose case?” Id., p. 13, l. 20. Appellant’s counsel argued that Rose was 30 years old and had been “superceded by Howell”. Id., p. 14, ll. 2-5.

The Circuit Court ultimately denied Appellant’s motion and allowed the order to enter increasing the Appellant’s child support obligation to include the veterans’ disability benefits he claims were not to be included in the calculation of his child support obligation. The Circuit Court concluded its reasoning by stating:

[I]t looks here that veterans’ administration benefits are income.... Income is income, and all income has to be included.... I don’t believe in...technicalities taking someone’s right away from having justice. And so, I’m not ruling because you filed your objection late. I’m ruling because there’s no case law that I’ve seen that supports your position.

And if this Howell case actually overrules Row[sic] and it says – and – and if Congress has indicated that this income does not have to be calculated for child support, then...the Court of Appeals can reverse me, and then all the judges in Michigan can know that there’s a new case in the land.

[Id., pp. 16-17].

As to the facts of this case, Congress has indicated that Appellant’s veterans disability benefits are not income and may not be subject to calculations for child support awards in state domestic relations proceedings, and Howell did rule that with respect to such disability benefits, 38 USC 5301 erects a jurisdictional bar to a state court’s exercise of authority over such funds.

Therefore, Appellant brings this appeal.

ARGUMENTS

I. APPELLANT IS A DISABLED VETERAN WHO IS NOT A RETIREE AND THEREFORE NOT A RECIPIENT OF RETIRED PAY OR DISABILITY PAY IN LIEU OF RETIRED PAY, BUT RATHER HE IS A RECIPIENT OF PURE VETERANS’ DISABILITY PAY. AS SUCH 10 USC 1408, 42 USC 659 AND 38 USC 5301 ARE FEDERAL LAWS PASSED BY CONGRESS PURSUANT TO ITS ARTICLE I ENUMERATED “WAR POWERS” THAT PREEMPT STATE LAW PROHIBITING STATE COURTS FROM CONSIDERING APPELLANT’S DISABILITY PAY FOR PAYMENT OF CHILD SUPPORT AND/OR SPOUSAL SUPPORT. THE CIRCUIT COURT ERRED IN CONCLUDING APPELLANT WAS RESPONSIBLE TO PAY APPELLEE USING THESE FUNDS

A. Standard of Review

Whether federal law preempts state law is a question of law to be reviewed de novo by this Court. Beek v City of Wyoming, 495 Mich 1, 8; 846 NW2d 531 (2014).

B. Applicable Law

1. The Supremacy Clause

The Supremacy Clause provides: “This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof...shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.” US Const, art VI, cl 2 (emphasis added). Federal law preempts state law where Congress has intended to foreclose any state regulation in the subject matter regardless of whether state law is consistent or inconsistent with federal standards. Oneok Inc v Learjet Inc, 135 S Ct 1591, 1594-1595; 191 L Ed 2d 511 (2015). See also Mich Cannery & Freezers Ass'n v Agric Mktg & Bargaining Bd, 467 US 461, 469; 104 S Ct 2518; 81 L Ed 2d 399 (1984) (internal citations omitted), accord Hisquierdo v Hisquierdo, 439 US 572, 582-83; 99 S Ct 802; 59 L Ed 2d 1 (1979). This is known as “field preemption”. Arizona v United States, 567 US 387; 132 S Ct 2492, 2502-2503; 183 L Ed 2d 351 (2012). In such cases, the “States are precluded from regulating conduct in a field that Congress, acting within its proper authority, has determined must be regulated by its exclusive governance.” Id. at 2501. When a state law is preempted by federal law, the state law is “without effect.” Maryland v Louisiana, 451 US 725, 746; 101 S Ct 2114; 68 L Ed 2d 576 (1981). See also Kalb v Feuerstein, 308 US 433, 440, n 12; 60 S Ct 343; 84 L Ed 370, 375 (1940). Justice Story said of this latter phrase that it “was but an expression of the necessary meaning of the former [that the Constitution and laws made in pursuance thereof shall be the supreme law], introduced from abundant caution, to make its obligation more strongly felt by the state judges” and “it removed every pretence, under which ingenuity could, by its miserable subterfuges, escape from the controlling power of the constitution.” Story, Commentaries on the Constitution, vol II, § 1839, p 642 (3d ed) (1858).

Where Congress passes legislation pursuant to its enumerated Article I powers, state law must yield under the Supremacy Clause. Ridgway v Ridgway, 454 US 46, 54-55; 102 S Ct 49; 70 L Ed 2d 39 (1981). Indeed, state courts have no subject matter jurisdiction where their actions are preempted by federal law. Henry v Laborers' Local 1191, 495 Mich 260, 287, n 12; 848 NW2d 130 (2014). This is because, as Chief Justice Marshall said long ago: “States have no power...to retard, impede, burden, or in any manner control, the operations of the constitutional laws enacted by Congress to carry into execution the powers vested in the general government.” McCulloch v Maryland, 17 US (4 Wheat) 316, 436; 4 L Ed 579 (1819) (MARSHALL, CJ) (emphasis added).

2. Veterans’ Benefits Spring from Congress’ Enumerated War Powers

Congress’ authority for enacting veterans’ benefits legislation springs from its enumerated “War Powers” or “Military Powers”. US Const, art I, sec 8, cls 12-14. See, e.g., Wissner v Wissner, 338 US 655, 660-661; 70 S Ct 398; 94 L Ed 424 (1950); United States v Oregon, 366 US 643, 649; 81 S Ct 1278; 6 L Ed 2d 575 (1961) (“Congress undoubtedly has the power – under its constitutional powers to raise armies and navies and to conduct wars – to pay pensions...[to] veterans.”); Johnson v Robison, 415 US 361, 376, 385; 94 S Ct 1160; 39 L Ed 2d 389 (1974). Congress has exercised legislative authority in these premises since the earliest days of the Republic. See, e.g., Hayburn’s Case, 2 US (Dall) 409, 1 L Ed 436, 2 Dall 409 (1792) (discussing the Invalid Pensions Act of 1792). See also Rombauer, Marital Status and Eligibility for Federal Statutory Income Benefits: A Historical Survey, 52 Wash L Rev 227, 228 (1977); Waterstone, Returning Veterans and Disability Law, 85:3 Notre Dame L Rev 1081, 1084 (2010). Where Congress explicitly relies on this power, the Supreme Court has perhaps nowhere else accorded Congress greater deference”. McCarty v McCarty, 453 US 210, 236; 101 S Ct 2728; 69 L Ed 2d 589 (1981), citing Rostker v Goldberg, 453 US 57, 64-65; 101 S Ct 2646; 69 L Ed 2d 478 (1981). As with all matters of federal preemption, where Congress acts in furtherance of its enumerated constitutional powers under Article I, state law must yield. Ridgway, 454 US at 55.

3. Federal Law Concerning Military Benefits Completely Preempts State Domestic Relations and Family Law

Such legislation directly addresses and preempts state law, even in domestic family law matters, an area in which federal courts have traditionally deferred to state courts. Ridgway, supra at 54. There, the Court noted “[n]otwithstanding the limited application of Federal law in the field of domestic relations generally, this Court even in that area, has not hesitated to protect, under the Supremacy Clause, rights and expectancies [of servicemembers and veterans] established by Federal law against the operation of state law, or to prevent the frustration and erosion of the congressional policy embodied in the federal rights.” Thus, “a state divorce decree, like other law governing the economic aspects of domestic relations, must give way to clearly conflicting federal enactments.” Id. at 55 (emphasis added). See also Hillman v Maretta, 569 US 483, 491; 133 S Ct 1943; 186 L Ed 2d 43 (2013) (same). Absolute federal preemption of state law in these matters still applies. Howell v. Howell, 581 US ___; 137 S Ct 1400, 1404, 1405-1406; 197 L Ed 2d 781 (2017) emphasizing that “McCarty[, supra], with its rule of federal preemption, still applies” and citing 38 USC 5301(a)(1) as the federal statute that prohibits state courts from exercising jurisdiction or authority over any veterans’ benefits other than those explicitly allowed for by Congress and stating further that “[s]tate courts cannot ‘vest’ that which (under governing federal law) they lack the authority to give. Cf. 38 USC 5301(a)(1).” (emphasis added).

It follows from the foregoing that while “the whole subject of domestic relations between husband and wife belongs to the laws of the States and not to the laws of the United States,” and “state family and family-property law must do ‘major damage’ to ‘clear and substantial’ federal interests before the Supremacy Clause will demand that state law be overridden,” “the application of community property law conflicts with the federal military retirement scheme” and is completely preempted unless Congress has otherwise provided. McCarty v McCarty, 453 US at 220, 223, citing Hisquierdo, 439 US at 581 (internal quotation marks omitted). See also Ridgway, 454 US at 54, citing McCarty, supra and Hisquierdo, supra and stating that “[n]otwithstanding the limited application of federal law in the field of domestic relations generally..., this Court, even in that area, has not hesitated to protect, under the Supremacy Clause, rights and expectancies established by federal law against the operation of state law, or to prevent the frustration and erosion of the congressional policy embodied in the federal rights.” (emphasis added).

In McCarty, the Court ruled Congress had completely preempted state law from exercising jurisdiction or authority over veterans’ benefits in state court divorce proceedings. In this unique field, the Court explained, Congress had historically intended all military benefits to be property of the servicemember. Id. at 228. After explaining the historical underpinnings of veterans’ benefits and that in this area of the law, Congress has occupied the entire field of state law, the Court noted that veterans’ retirement benefits were the personal entitlement of the retiree. Id. at 232. Thus, the Court held state courts are not free to reduce the amounts that Congress had determined are necessary for the servicemember without reference to federal law. Id. at 233. Finally, since Congress intended all pay to reach the beneficiary, state courts could not attach or assign funds to satisfy a property settlement incident to the dissolution of a marriage. Id. at 228, citing and referring to the anti-attachment provisions, 38 USC 3101, the predecessor of 38 USC 5301.

4. The USFSPA Lifted Preemption Only for Marital Property Division

In 1982, after McCarty, Congress recognized a limited exception to federal pre-emption in the Uniformed Services Former Spouses’ Protection Act (USFSPA), 10 USC 1408. See Mansell v Mansell, 490 US 581, 587-95; 109 S Ct 2023; 104 L Ed 2d 675 (1989), accord King v King, 149 Mich App 495, 499-500; 386 NW2d 562 (1986). The USFSPA allowed state courts to treat only one small portion of veterans’ benefits (disposable military retirement pay) as property subject to division under the respective states’ pre-existing community or equitable property laws. 10 USC 1408(c)(1); Mansell, 490 US at 594-95. All other military benefits (non-disposable retirement benefits (defined in 10 USC 1408(a)(4)(B) and (c)(1)), disability benefits, and special compensation incident to military service remained federally protected veterans' benefits.

5. Federal Legislation Provides When State Courts Can and Cannot Count Disability Pay Towards a Former Servicemembers' Child Support and Spousal Support Obligations

Title 10 USC 1408 (the Uniformed Services Former Spouses Protection Act (USFSPA)) and 42 USC 659 (the Child Support Enforcement Act (CSEA)) represent a Congressional lifting of this absolute preemption over state law. These provisions provide, in certain specific cases, that state courts may count a portion of a veterans' disability benefits towards his or her marital property, child support and/or spousal support obligations in divorce proceedings. See 10 USC 1408(a)(4)(A)(ii); (d)(1); (e)(6); 42 USC 659(h)(1)(A)(ii)(V).

However, 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii) specifically excludes from this allowance disability benefits paid to a disabled military veteran who is not a retiree and who has therefore not waived retirement pay to receive disability pay. In such case, 38 USC 5301 further provides an affirmative jurisdictional protection of veteran's disability benefits and a positive prohibition on the exercise of subject matter jurisdiction by state courts over veterans' disability benefits and prohibits "any legal process whatever" from being used to force or otherwise redirect such benefits to anyone other than the federally designated beneficiary. Where benefits are protected by this provision, state courts have no power or authority to order that they vest in anyone other than the designated beneficiary. Howell, 137 S Ct at 1406, citing 38 USC 5301(a)(1).

In 1987, the United States Supreme Court ruled state courts could include veteran's disability benefits when considering a veteran's child support obligations for retiree veterans. See Rose v Rose, 481 US 619, 625; 17 S Ct 2029; 95 L Ed 2d 599 (1987), citing 42 USC 659. In 1999, however, Congress specifically amended 42 USC 659 and added, inter alia, subsection (h)(1)(B)(iii) excluding from this lifting of absolute federal preemption a certain class of veterans

(those who are not eligible for retirement and who therefore receive no retirement pay and do not and cannot waive retirement pay to receive disability pay). See 10 USC 1408(a)(4)(A)(ii); (d)(1); (e)(6) and 42 USC 659(h)(1)(A)(ii)(V); (h)(1)(B)(iii). See also 42 USCA 659, 2011 bound volume (detailing the amendment). This positive federal legislation passed after Rose, supra, simply precludes state courts from exercising any jurisdiction or authority over veteran's disability benefits paid to these individuals. Of course, where Congress in the exercise of its enumerated Article I powers passes legislation that directly changes precedent of the United States Supreme Court, the federal statutory law will prevail as the authoritative final word in the constitutional hierarchy.

Moreover, as such benefits are authorized by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, they are protected further by 38 USC 5301 from any legal process whatever. The latter statute removes jurisdictional authority of state courts over funds that are protected within this provision. Section 5301 is to be liberally construed to effectuate its purpose. Porter v Aetna Cas. & Sur Co, 370 US 159, 162; 82 S Ct 1231; 8 L Ed 2d 407 (1962).

C. Analysis

As most recently acknowledged by the Court in Howell, supra at 1406, federal law says when a state court may order a former servicemember to use some of his or her disability pay (specifically when he or she waives retirement pay to receive disability pay) to satisfy state court child support and spousal support orders. Id., citing 10 USC 1408(e)(6) and Rose, supra. Federal law also says when such pay is protected from any legal process whatever, including assignment, garnishment, and/or indemnity or reimbursement orders. Id. at 1405-1406 (citing 38 USC 5301(a)(1) and stating "state courts cannot 'vest' that which (under governing federal law) they lack the authority to give. Cf. 38 USC 5301(a)(1) (providing that disability benefits are generally nonassignable).”). See also 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii).

Federal law, through the Uniformed Services Former Spouses Protection Act (USFSPA) 10 USC 1408 and 38 USC 5301, prohibit disposition of any federally authorized benefits, that is benefits designated via Article I enumerated powers of Congress by federal statute for the benefit and use of the veteran (i.e., retirement pay, disability pay, and retirement pay that may be waived to receive disability pay, inter alia), except for a specific portion reserved for payment of alimony and child support only from waived pay received by military retirees. See 10 USC 1408(a)(4)(B) and (e)(6); the Child Support Enforcement Act (CSEA) 42 USC 659(h)(1)(A)(ii)(V) and (h)(1)(B)(iii); and 38 USC 5301(a)(1).

To explain how this applies to Appellant and, more importantly, how it restricts what a state court can and cannot do (i.e., what “authority and jurisdiction” it has), one must walk through each of the relevant sections of these controlling federal statutes.

Section 1408(a)(2) of the USFSPA first describes court orders that are subject to the federal allowances and limitations as:

[A] final decree of divorce, dissolution, annulment, or legal separation issued by a court...(including a final decree modifying the terms of a previously issued decree..., or a support order...which provides for (i) payment of child support (as defined in...42 USC 659(i)(2));[and] (ii) payment of alimony (as defined in...42 USC 659(i)(3)).

[10 USC 1408(a)(2) (emphasis added).]

Section 1408(d)(1) then defines where a court’s order is recognized by the federal government to satisfy a child support and/or spousal support order:

After effective service on the Secretary concerned of a court order providing for the payment of child support or alimony...specifically providing for the payment of an amount of the disposable retired pay from a member to the spouse or a former spouse of the member, the Secretary shall make payments (subject to the limitations of this section) from the disposable retired pay of the member to the spouse or former spouse...in an amount sufficient to satisfy the amount of child support and alimony set forth in the court order and, with respect to a division of property, in the amount of disposable retired pay specifically provided for in the court order.

[Id. (emphasis added).]

Section (a)(4)(A)(ii) next defines “disposable retired pay” as “the total monthly retired pay to which a member is entitled less amounts which...are deducted from the retired pay of such member...as a result of a waiver of retired pay required by law in order to receive [disability] compensation under title 5 or title 38”. Id. (bracketed information provided for context). So far, under these provisions, Congress authorizes state courts (and in fact recognizes orders from state courts) dividing “disposable retired pay” to satisfy child support and spousal support orders. What is also important about this definition is that it leads to a consideration of when a state court may also force a veteran to pay to his or her former spouse some of his or her disability pay that the veteran receives when he or she waives retirement pay in a child support or spousal support scenario.

Consider from the discussion on applicable federal law, infra at pp 10-16, that federal law preempts, and has always preempted, state law in this specific area: family law and domestic relations law where federal military benefits (retirement and disability) are concerned, unless otherwise provided by Congress. Wissner, Hisquierdo, McCarty, Rose, Mansell, and finally, Howell, inter alia, each contain this statement of the absolute rule concerning disposition of federal benefits authorized by Congress under its enumerated Article I “war” powers. In 1982, Congress then lifted this preemption for veterans benefits only for a small subset of circumstances by passage of the USFSPA. It allowed a division of a portion of a former servicemembers “disposable retired pay”. In conjunction with the CSEA, it also allowed a division of veterans’ disability pay for payment to former spouses for child support and spousal support, but only for those former servicemembers who are entitled to claim retired pay, and who have waived that retirement pay to receive disability pay. See 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii). Otherwise, “McCarty with its rule of federal preemption still applies.” Howell, 137 S Ct at 1404. In other words, unless Congress has made an exception to the preexisting federal preemption that exists by virtue of its enumerated powers under Article I of the Constitution and as enforced by the Supremacy Clause, federal law prohibits exercise by state courts over protected federal benefits.

Now, consider the USFSPA and CSEA. 10 USC 1408 and 42 USC 659 represent a Congressional lifting of this absolute preemption. These provisions (and accompanying federal regulations and policy) spell out in plain language when federal veterans disability pay may and may not be subject to state court legal process.

Section 659 constitutes federal recognition of state court authority over otherwise federally protected veterans’ disability benefits, which recognition allows state courts to garnish or order through legal process that the veteran use disability pay to satisfy a child support or spousal support order. Subsection (a) simply lays out the federal government’s “[c]onsent to support enforcement”, as follows:

Notwithstanding any other provision of law (including...section 5301 of Title 38...)...moneys (the entitlement to which is based upon remuneration for employment [i.e., retirement benefits based on years in service]) due from or payable by, the United States...to any individual, including members of the Armed Forces of the United States, shall be subject, in like manner and to the same extent as if the United States...were a private person, to withholding in accordance with State law...and to any other legal process...to enforce the legal obligation of the individual to provide child support or alimony.

[42 USC 659(a) (emphasis added) (bracketed information provided for context, see 5 CFR 581.103 defining disposable income and remuneration for employment).]

However, sections 659(h)(1)(A)(ii)(V) and (h)(1)(B)(iii) go on to clearly separate VA disability pay into two categories, one category that is subject to this withholding and legal process, and one category that is not, as follows:

(h) Moneys subject to process.

(1) In general. Subject to paragraph (2) [moneys already pre-excluded for tax and personal debt purposes not relevant here], moneys payable to an individual which are considered to be based upon remuneration for employment [and thus fall within subsection (a) as being subject to legal process by state courts], for purposes of this section...

(A) consist of...

(iii) periodic benefits...or other payments...

(V) by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs as compensation for a service-connected disability paid by the Secretary to a former member of the Armed Forces who is in receipt of retired or retainer pay if the former member has waived a portion of the retired pay or retainer pay in order to receive such compensation;...

(B) do not include any payment...

(iii) of periodic benefits under title 38, United States Code [where Title 38 (an expansive Title in the United States Code addresses the requirements of and provision for service-connected disability benefits)], except as provided in subparagraph (A)(ii)(V) [addressing those disability benefits that may be counted where they are received when the veteran actually is entitled to retired pay and waives that retired pay to receive that Title 38 disability pay, see 38 USC 5305].”

[Id. (emphasis added) (bracketed information provided for context).]

Although the trial court and Appellee’s lawyer would have this Court believe that this case is governed by Rose, supra, that is simply not the case. First, as noted, Rose was a 1987 decision and the amended language of 42 USC 659 did not exist. Per the 1999 amendment to 42 USC 659, adding (h)(1)(B)(iii), Appellant fits within the category of those veterans whose disability pay is excluded from all consideration as disposable income (or remuneration for employment) by state courts to pay spousal support and/or child support. Appellant is not a retiree, did not waive retired pay to receive disability pay, and receives only disability pay authorized by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs under Title 38. These benefits are further protected by the positive language of 38 USC 5301 from “all legal process whatever”.

The positive enactment by Congress of 42 USC 659 applies directly to this case. While this may appear, at first glance, to be a convoluted statutory argument, as it relates to those servicemembers who were never eligible for retirement (because they did not have the requisite length of time in service (and the rank achieved therewith) to be able to collect retirement pay), but who are still entitled to disability benefits under Title 38 because they were injured and incurred service-connected disabilities during their active duty service, the federal provisions allowing state courts to order servicemembers to use their federal disability pay for child support or spousal support are not applicable. It is also noteworthy to point out the distinction is made between “remuneration for employment”, i.e., income, where retirement pay, and even disability pay that replaces retired pay due to a waiver under 38 USC 5305, is considered to be received as a result of the servicemembers time in service, resulting pension eligibility and amount, i.e., his or her prior employment; whereas, the pure Title 38 disability pay for service-connected disability is not considered remuneration for employment because it is paid to the servicemember due to his or her injuries incurred during service, not because of time in service, i.e., employment. Federal regulations also confirm this. 5 CFR 581.103(c)(7) mirrors 42 USC 659 and states that “[m]oneys which are subject to garnishment” include “[a]ny payment by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs as compensation for a service-connected disability paid by the Secretary to a former member of the Armed Forces who is in receipt of retired or retainer pay if the former member has waived either the entire amount or a portion of the retired or retainer pay in order to receive such compensation.

In such cases, only that part of the Department of Veterans Affairs payment that is in lieu of the waived retired pay or waived retainer pay is subject to garnishment.” (emphasis added).

In sum, there are two categories of federal veterans’ disability benefits for purposes of this analysis:

- (1) disability pay that can be taken by states to pay child support and alimony orders, but only if the veteran is also a recipient of retirement pay, and only if he or she waives that pay to receive VA disability pay. 42 USC 659(h)(1)(A)(ii)(V). In this situation, and in this situation only, the statutes, 10 USC 1408 and 42 USC 659, allow states to order that a percentage of the VA disability pay be paid to satisfy such orders; and
- (2) disability pay that cannot be taken by the states to pay such orders, because the veteran is not also a recipient of military retired pay – these funds – pure VA disability pay and/or VA authorized special compensation – are protected by federal law from all legal process that the states might employ against the veteran. 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii). See 38 USC 5301(a)(1).

With respect to this second category of pay, pursuant to 38 USC 5301(a)(1), states may not attach, seize, garnish, or otherwise effect any legal process (equitable or otherwise) whatever with respect to these types of funds. Relevant to this case, 38 USC 5301(a)(1) states plainly:

Payments of benefits due or to become due under any law administered by the Secretary [of Veterans Affairs] shall not be assignable except to the extent specifically authorized by law, and such payments made to, or on account of, a beneficiary...shall not be liable to attachment, levy, or seizure by or under any legal or equitable process whatever, either before or after receipt by the beneficiary....”

[Id. (emphasis added).]

This statutory prohibition springs from Congress’s war powers for purposes of protecting veterans’ benefits. Atlanta v Stokes, 175 Ga 201, 210-212; 165 SE 270 (Ga 1932); In re Ballard’s Estate, 293 NYS 31, 32-33; 161 Mis 785 (NY 1937). Its purpose was to afford “continuous support” of persons suffering because of their military service. Yake v Yake, 183 A 555; 170 Md. 75 (Md 1936). The Supreme Court stated 38 USC 5301 is to be liberally construed to protect funds granted by Congress “for maintenance and support for beneficiaries thereof” and such funds “remain inviolate.” Porter v Aetna Cas. & Sur Co, 370 US 159, 162; 82 S. Ct. 1231; 8 L. Ed. 2d 407 (1962). Such payments are exempt “either before or after receipt by the beneficiary”. Id. As such, “[t]he monies which are paid are preserved by statute for the sole use of the veteran, ‘regardless of the technicalities of title and other formalities.’” American Training Serv’s Inc v Veterans Admin, 434 F Supp 988, 995-96 (DNJ 1977), citing Porter, supra. Thus, “[a]ny legal formulation or arrangement which could dilute or evade the literal and historical thrust of the statute’s protective provisions must be viewed with appropriate caution.” Id.

As noted by the Supreme Court in Howell, veterans’ benefits are a personal entitlement. 137 S. Ct. at 1403, citing McCarty, 453 U.S. at 224. Unless federal law lifts the preemptive effect of legislation providing veterans with such benefits, the states cannot exercise authority over these funds. Howell ruled that pursuant to this provision, state courts could not exercise authority over any non-disposable veterans’ benefits under 38 USC 5301(a)(1). Howell, 137 S Ct at 1405. The Court said: “State courts cannot ‘vest’ that which (under governing federal law) they lack authority to give. Cf. 38 USC 5301(a)(1) (providing that disability benefits are generally non-assignable).” The court also noted that equity cannot be used to force the veteran to part with these monies because such orders have the same effect of depriving the veteran of the benefit that Congress intended to be solely for the veteran. Id. at 1406. “All such orders are thus preempted.” Id. See also Ridgway v Ridgway, 454 US at 53-56 (holding that under the anti-attachment provision (identical in all respects to 38 USC 5301) a state court could not impose a “constructive trust” on the proceeds in favor of the servicemember’s former spouse, stating that such measures by state courts “fail[] to give effect to the unqualified sweep of the federal statute,” and that such anti-attachment provisions “ensure[] that the benefits actually reach the beneficiary[,] preempts all state law that stands in its way[,] protects the benefits from legal process ‘[notwithstanding] any other law of any State[,] prevents the vagaries of state law from disrupting the national scheme, and guarantees a national uniformity that enhances the effectiveness of congressional policy.’” (internal quotations and brackets removed).

As noted previously, while the Supreme Court in Howell recognized the exception for child support and spousal support, citing Rose v. Rose, 481 US 619; 107 S Ct 2029; 95 L Ed 2d 599 (1987), the latter case did not address the precise federal statutory language, which under Congress’ enumerated Article I powers would preempt state law. The exclusion in 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii) was not addressed in and present for consideration by the Court in Rose. Federal statutory law now excludes disability pay (other than that portion received if the veteran is also a recipient of retirement pay). Compare, 42 USC 659(h)(1)(A)(ii)(V) with 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii), and Rose, supra 634-635, interpreting the now-repealed 42 USC 662(f)(3) (the predecessor section), which did not contain this exclusion in subsection (h)(1)(B)(iii). When Rose was decided, Congress had not written in this flat exclusion for non-retiree veterans’ disability pay. See Rose, supra at 644-647, White, J., dissenting. Moreover, the Court in Howell was addressing the circumstance of a servicemember who is entitled to retired pay and waives that retired pay to receive the disability pay. That is not the case here.

There is no published decision in Michigan addressing the arguments presented herein. That is, no court has addressed whether, post-Rose, and post-amendment of the CSEA in 1999, a non-retiree veteran in receipt of pure disability pay (as opposed to disability pay received as a result of waiver of retired pay per 10 USC 1408) is off limits to state courts in child support and spousal support cases, as expressly provided by 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii), and thus is jurisdictionally protected as further outlined in 38 USC 5301.

Only unpublished decisions from the Michigan Court of Appeals discuss, with varying degrees of depth, the effects of federal law on state court child support and spousal support orders. One case addresses 10 USC 1408, 42 USC 659 and 38 USC 5301, but did not analyze the precise language of subsection (h)(1)(B)(iii) of the CSEA (because there the former servicemember was a retiree and receiving some disability pay in lieu of retired pay). (ATTACHMENT E, Turkette v Turkette, Unpublished Opinion Per Curiam of the Michigan Court of Appeals, issued February 23, 2010 (Docket No. 287695), lv den'd at 488 Mich 856; 787 NW2d 118 (2010)). There, the panel reasoned, in line with Appellant's arguments here, that pure veterans' disability pay that is not received in lieu of waived retired pay would be off limits for support orders and would also be protected by 38 USC 5301(a)(1). Id. at 8-12.

The only other case to address the issue concerning the applicability of federal law concerning veterans' disability pay to state child support awards did not specify whether the former servicemember was a retiree and did not address the restrictions imposed on state courts by 42 USC 659. (ATTACHMENT F, Lewis v Lewis, Unpublished Opinion Per Curiam of the Michigan Court of Appeals, issued July 31, 2014 (Docket No. 315730)). There, the panel simply concluded that 38 USC 5301 did not apply to state court orders forcing a payment of veterans' disability benefits. Id., Slip Op. at 2-3. It did not consider the additional issues discussed herein and, to a lesser degree in Turkette, supra, which arise when applying 10 USC 1408, 42 USC 659, and 38 USC 5301 to the circumstances faced by a non-retiree veteran who is a recipient of pure VA disability pay. Appellant, of course, is in this latter category.

To the extent the two panels in Turkette and Lewis did come to opposite conclusions regarding the reach of 38 USC 5301, neither discussed the exclusion of veterans' disability benefits from consideration in state court domestic relations orders concerning child support and/or spousal support mandated by 42 USC 659(a), (h)(1)(A)(ii)(V), and (h)(1)(B)(iii), and accompanying federal regulations. Moreover, the United States Supreme Court confirmed in Howell that, contrary to the statement in Lewis, where Congress has pursuant to its enumerated Article I powers prohibited the disposition by state courts of federal disability benefits, state courts have no authority or jurisdiction to enter an order directing a contrary disposition. Howell, 137 S Ct at 1405-1406. The Court cited 38 USC 5301(a)(1) and clearly ruled it applies directly to state court orders seeking to compel the veteran to use disability benefits to pay the former spouse, and not just to garnishment, creditors or attachment proceedings. Id.

The purpose of Congress in enacting 38 USC 5301 was to “prevent the deprivation and depletion of the means of subsistence of veterans dependent upon these benefits as the main source of their income.” Rose, 481 U.S. at 630. For a very limited time (after Rose v. Rose), the judicial allowance to state courts to force veterans to use their disability pay for child support and spousal support appears to have applied across the board to all disabled veterans. However, Congress realized this worked an inequitable result on a certain subset of disabled veterans; namely those who had been injured and rendered disabled and unable to serve before they had acquired years in service sufficient to also have the financial support and economic security of retirement pay.

For this subset of veterans, which, due to the last 3 decades of up-tempo, high-volume deployment and military operations in which the U.S. military has been involved are the largest population of disabled veterans in existence, the significance of this cannot be understated. See Trauschweizer, 32 International Bibliography of Military History 1 (2012), pp. 48-49 (describing the intensity of military operations commencing in the 1990’s culminating in full-scale military involvement in Iraq and Afghanistan during the past three decades). See also VA, Trends in Veterans with a Service-Connected Disability: 1985 to 2011, Slide 4 at: http://www.va.gov/vetdata/docs/QuickFacts/SCD_trends_FINAL.pdf.

Indeed, the country is no longer only faced with the waning population of disabled veterans from the post-Vietnam era and prior. Rose was, as noted, a 1987 case, and it necessarily addressed an entirely different population of aging and disabled veterans. Since 1990, there has been a 46 percent increase in disabled veterans, placing the total number of veterans with service-connected disabilities above 3.3 million as of 2011. VA, Trends, supra. By 2014, the number of veterans with a service-connected disability was 3.8 million. See U.S. Census Bureau, Facts for Features at: <http://www.census.gov/newsroom/facts-for-features/2015/cb15-ff23.html>. As of March 22, 2016, the number of veterans receiving disability benefits had increased from 3.9 million to 4.5 million. Id. See also VA, National Center for Veterans Analysis and Statistics, What's New at: https://www.va.gov/vetdata/veteran_population.asp. Also, since 1990, there has been a remarkable increase in veterans with disability ratings of 50 percent or higher, with approximately 900,000 in 2011. VA, Trends, supra at slide 6. That same year, 1.1 million of the 3.3 million total disabled veterans had a disability rating of 70 percent or higher. Id.

Finally, the disability numbers and ratings for younger veterans has markedly inclined. Conducting an adjusted data search, 570,400 out of 2,198,300 non-institutionalized civilian veterans aged 21 to 64 had a VA service-connected disability at 70 percent or higher in the United States in 2014. See Erickson, W., Lee, C., von Schrader, S. Disability Statistics from the American Community Survey (ACS) (2017). Data retrieved from Cornell University Disability Statistics website: www.disabilitystatistics.org. Thus, according to this data analysis, half of the total number of veterans with a disability rating greater than 70 percent are between 21 and 64 years of age.

The National Veterans Foundation found that over 2.5 million Marines, Sailors, Soldiers, Airmen and National Guardsmen served in Iraq and Afghanistan. Of those, nearly 6,600 were killed, and over 770,000 have filed disability claims. See <http://www.nvf.org/staggering-number-of-disabled-veterans/>. Yet another study shows nearly 40,000 service members returning from Iraq and Afghanistan have suffered traumatic injuries, with over 300,000 at risk for PTSD or other psychiatric problems. These veterans face numerous post-deployment health concerns, sharing substantial burdens with their families.

These staggering numbers are, in part, a reflection of the nature of wounds received in modern military operations, modern medicine's ability to aggressively treat the wounded, and modern transportation's ability to get those most severely wounded to the most technologically advanced medical treatment facilities in a matter of hours. Fazal, Dead Wrong? Battle Deaths, Military Medicine, and Exaggerated Reports of War's Demise, 39:1 International Security 95 (2014), pp. 95-96, 107-113. Physical injuries in these situations are understandably horrific. Id. See also Kriner & Shen, Invisible Inequality: The Two Americas of Military Sacrifice, 46 Univ. of Memphis L. Rev. 545, 570 (2016). However, many veterans also suffer severe psychological injuries attendant to witnessing the sudden arbitrariness and indiscretion of war's violence. Zeber, Noel, Pugh, Copeland & Parchman, Family perceptions of post-deployment healthcare needs of Iraq/Afghanistan military personnel, 7(3) Mental Health in Family Medicine 135-143 (2010). As one observer has stated: "assignments can shift rapidly from altruistic humanitarian work to the delivery of immense deadly force, leaving service members with confusing internal conflicts that are difficult to integrate. During deployment, even medical personnel are at times compelled to use deadly force to protect themselves, their patients, and their fellow soldiers." Finley, Fields of Combat: Understanding PTSD Among Veterans of Iraq and Afghanistan (Cornell Univ. Press 2011).

Combat-related post-traumatic stress symptoms (PTSS), with or without a diagnosis of post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) can negatively impact soldiers and their families. These conditions have been linked to increased domestic violence, divorce, and suicides. Melvin, Couple Functioning and Posttraumatic Stress in Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom – Veterans and Spouses, available from PILOTS: Published International Literature On Traumatic Stress. (914613931; 93193). See also Schwab, et al., War and the Family, 11(2) Stress Medicine 131-137 (1995).

Such conditions are exacerbated when returning veterans must face stress in their families caused by their absence. Despite the amazing cohesion of the military community and the best efforts of the larger military family support network, separations and divorces are common. Families, already stretched by this extraordinary burden, are often pushed beyond their limits causing relationships to break down. Long deployments, the daily uncertainty of not knowing whether the family will ever be reunited, and the everyday travails of civilian life are difficult enough. A physical disability coupled with mental and emotional scars brought on by wartime environments make the veteran's reintegration with his family even more challenging. Finley, supra.

This younger population of disabled veterans are not entitled to retirement pay because they were injured or wounded during the first few years of their service to the country. Like Appellant, who was only a private first class when he was injured, many disabled veterans in this population do not and will never have the financial security and economic assurances of a retirement pension and all the other benefits that come with being classified as retired. When it became apparent that this growing subset of disabled veterans were also being subjected to having their disability benefits taken by state courts to satisfy support orders in domestic relations cases, Congress acted to differentiate this class of veterans by amending the CSEA and adding 42 U.S.C. § 659(h)(1)(A)(ii)(V) and (h)(1)(B)(iii) distinguishing the two subsets of veterans and the two classes of disability benefits, those which are available to former spouses and minor children from the former group of retiree veterans and those which are not from the latter group of non-retiree veterans.

Because federal law has always preempted state law in this very specific circumstance, any state-court domestic relations order awarding support (child and/or spousal) would be void and unenforceable, both going forward and retroactively. In this case, Appellant's federal disability benefits are specifically excluded from consideration as remuneration for employment, and therefore as income, by 42 USC 659(a); (h)(1)(A)(ii)(V); and (h)(1)(B)(iii). As such, these benefits are jurisdictionally protected from any legal process whatever by 38 USC 5301.

Federal law is very clear and has been changed since Rose v. Rose. As the Circuit Court noted in this case, if federal law protects the monies that Appellee is claiming are due, then the outcome of this case would be different. See ATTACHMENT C, Tr., pp. 16-17. The Circuit Court had all the arguments presented to it, but it did not realize their jurisdictional and legal significance.

A state court that rules incorrectly on a matter preempted by federal law acts in excess of its jurisdiction. Henry, 495 Mich at 287, n 82. Such rulings, and the judgments they spring from, including all subsequent contempt and related orders (which would cover the sanctions award here) are void ab initio and exposed to collateral attack. The United States Supreme Court has said as much: "That a state court before which a proceeding is competently initiated may – by operation of supreme federal law – lose jurisdiction to proceed to a judgment unassailable on collateral attack is not a concept unknown to our federal system.” Kalb, 308 US at 440, n 12. “The States cannot, in the exercise of control over local laws and practice, vest state courts with power to violate the supreme law of the land.” Id. at 439. “States have no power...to retard, impede, burden, or in any manner control, the operations of the constitutional laws enacted by Congress to carry into execution the powers vested in the general government.” McCulloch v Maryland, 17 US (4 Wheat) 316, 436; 4 L Ed 579 (1819) (MARSHALL, CJ) (emphasis added). Absent such power, any attempt by state courts to impede the operation of federal laws must be considered a nullity and void. Kalb, supra.

This Court has the constitutional authority and indeed the duty to say what federal law requires and to abide by that law pursuant to the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution. Betty v Brooks & Perkins, 446 Mich 270, 276; 521 NW2d 518 (1994) (stating that “[w]here federal questions are involved [this Court] is bound to follow the prevailing opinions of the United States Supreme Court.”) (internal citations omitted); City of Detroit v Ambassador Bridge, 481 Mich 29, 36; 748 NW2d 221 (2008). It is necessary for this Court to address lower court decisions that “misapplied constitutional principles and United States Supreme Court precedent...” People v Bryant, 491 Mich 575, 583, n 5; 822 NW2d 124 (2012). See also Fletcher v Fletcher, 447 Mich 871, 881; 526 NW2d 889 (1994) (stating: “When a court incorrectly chooses, interprets, or applies the law, it commits legal error that the appellate court is bound to correct.”).

II. BECAUSE FEDERAL LAW PREEMPTS STATE LAW AND JURISDICTIONALLY PROHIBITS THE STATE COURT FROM CONSIDERING APPELLANT’S DISABILITY PAY FOR CALCULATION OF ANY CHILD SUPPORT OR SPOUSAL SUPPORT AWARD THE AWARD OF SANCTIONS (ATTORNEYS FEES AND COSTS) WAS NOT JUSTIFIED AND THE CIRCUIT COURT’S AWARD OF SANCTIONS WAS ALSO ERROR BECAUSE IT WAS BASED ON THE MISTAKEN ASSUMPTION THAT THERE WAS NO MERIT TO APPELLANT’S ARGUMENTS

A. Standard of Review

This Court reviews a trial court’s decision to award attorney fees and its determination of the reasonableness of the fees for an abuse of discretion. Teran v Rittley, 313 Mich App 197, 208; 882 NW2d 181 (2015), citing In re Temple Marital Trust, 278 Mich App 122, 128; 748 NW2d 265 (2008). A trial court abuses its discretion when it selects an outcome that is “outside the range of reasonable and principled outcomes.” Id. This Court reviews a trial court’s findings of fact underlying the attorney fee award under the “clear error” standard. Id. “A finding is clearly erroneous if the Court is left with a definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been made.” Cassidy v Cassidy, 318 Mich App 463, 479; 899 NW2d 65 (2017). Questions of law concerning the attorney fees award are reviewed de novo. Teran, supra at 208.

A trial court’s finding that a claim was frivolous is reviewed for clear error. In re Attorney Fees & Costs, 233 Mich App 694, 701; 593 NW2d 589 (1999). “A trial court’s decision is clearly erroneous when, although there is evidence to support it, the reviewing court is left with a definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been made.” Id.

B. Applicable Law

The party requesting attorney fees has the burden of showing facts sufficient to justify the award. Borowsky v Borowsky, 273 Mich App 666, 687; 733 NW2d 71 (2007). See also Woodington v Shokoohi, 288 Mich App 352, 370; 792 NW2d 63 (2010). Michigan follows the American rule concerning attorney fees and costs (sanctions). Sanctions may only be awarded by statute or court rule. Featherston v Steinhoff, 226 Mich App 584, 592-593; 575 NW2d 6 (1997).

C. Analysis

The rule originally cited as justifying an award of sanctions in this case was MCR 2.114 (ATTACHMENT B, Proposed Order). The trial court entered a judgment on the sanctions award for what it deemed were meritless and frivolous arguments. This would have been awarded under MCR 2.114, which has been repealed and essentially transferred to MCR 1.109(E). Such awards are not to be punitive. Id. Pursuant to MCR 2.114(F) (now MCR 1.109(E)), a party pleading a frivolous claim is subject to costs as provided in MCR 2.625(A)(2), which states that “costs shall be awarded as provided by MCL 600.2591.” MCL 600.2591 provides:

(1) Upon motion of any party, if a court finds that a civil action or defense to a civil action was frivolous, the court that conducts the civil action shall award to the prevailing party the costs and fees incurred by that party in connection with the civil action by assessing the costs and fees against the nonprevailing party and their attorney.

(2) The amount of costs and fees awarded under this section shall include all reasonable costs actually incurred by the prevailing party and any costs allowed by law or by court rule, including court costs and reasonable attorney fees.

(3) As used in this section:

(a) “Frivolous” means that at least 1 of the following conditions is met:

(i) The party’s primary purpose in initiating the action or asserting the defense was to harass, embarrass, or injure the prevailing party.

(ii) The party had no reasonable basis to believe that the facts underlying that party’s legal position were in fact true.

(iii) The party’s legal position was devoid of arguable legal merit.

This Court has held where a legal argument is asserted for the first time and has not been directly addressed, and where there is at least statutory and case law supporting it, even if rejected by the Circuit Court or this Court, ultimately, is not so lacking in legal merit as to support a conclusion that plaintiff's action was frivolous. AG v Harkins, 257 Mich App 564, 576-77; 669 NW2d 296 (2003) "Sanctions are not required and should not be imposed merely because the legal argument advanced by a litigant is rejected by the court." Id. Where, as here, there is no developed case law on the exact application of 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii) and 38 USC 5301, and where the unanimous Supreme Court decision in Howell held in 2017 that 38 USC 5301 would divest a state court of the jurisdiction and authority to award federal veterans disability pay to a former spouse where Congress has not authorized such an award, sanctions under MCR 1.109(E) and/or MCR 2.625 are not warranted. Indeed, in this case, the Circuit Court expressed a willingness to arrive a different conclusion if Congress and the United States Supreme Court considered the specific disability benefits at issue as non-disposable veterans' disability benefits that were not to be subjected to state court support awards in domestic relations proceedings. See ATTACHMENT C, Tr., pp. 16-17.

Moreover, where federal law preempts state law, and the state court entered an order or award contrary to such law, it had no jurisdiction or authority to do so and its award of sanctions based on that void order would also be void. Where the original judgment of a court is void, subsequent orders dependent upon the ostensible legitimacy of the original order will not be sustained. Bowie v Arder, 441 Mich 23, 57; 490 NW2d 568 (1992). "Where the order which is alleged to have been violated was made without jurisdiction, and required what the court had no right to require as a matter of legal authority, of course it has no force...." Haines v Haines, 35 Mich 138, 143 (1876) (CAMPBELL, J). See also Lessee of Hickey v Steward, 44 US (3 How) 750, 762; 11 L Ed 814 (1845) and 1 Freeman, Judgments (5th ed) (1925), § 322, pp 643-645.

The Michigan Supreme Court has long held where federal law occupies the field and preempts state law, “[t]he State courts are without jurisdiction in the most elementary sense.” Town & Country Motors Inc v Local Union No 328, 355 Mich 26, 54-55; 94 NW2d 442 (1959). The Court continued: “The order of the court being void for want of jurisdiction over the subject matter, we cannot remit to such court the fruitless task of ascertaining whether or not certain acts of the defendants constituted a “contempt” of the void order.” Id. The sanctions award was based on the reasoning that Appellant’s argument was devoid of legal merit.

However, Appellant has demonstrated plain language of federal law that applies directly to his circumstance. Thus, his arguments cannot be deemed meritless or frivolous under this Court’s prior enunciations of those standards. Harkins, supra.

Moreover, if federal law preempts state law in this particular circumstance, the Circuit Court would not have had subject matter jurisdiction to enter an order contrary to the prevailing federal law. Thus, any subsequent orders based on that void order would be equally void. Bowie, supra; Haines, supra; Town & Country Motors, supra.

CONCLUSION

As noted previously, federal law preempts state law concerning disposition of VA disability pay that is protected by 10 USC 1408, 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii), and 38 USC § 5301. Appellant is a non-retiree, disabled veteran. Therefore, he is the recipient of service-connected veterans’ disability benefits paid by the Veterans Administration (VA) under Title 38 of the United States Code. He is not a recipient of, nor is he eligible for, military retired pay. Therefore, he has not waived retired pay to receive disability pay. See 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii); 5 C.F.R. § 581.103(c)(7).

The disability benefits that Appellant does receive are those addressed in 42 USC § 659(h)(1)(B)(iii). As these benefits are protected by federal law pursuant to 38 USC § 5301(a)(1) from any legal process whatever, whether paid in the past, due or to become due, state courts have a continuing obligation to comply with preemptive federal law and must ensure these funds are received by the beneficiary, and not included in or made a part of any calculation of spousal support and/or child support. Howell held state courts are prohibited from “vesting” entitlement to these benefits in anyone other than the beneficiary. Id. at 1405-1406, citing 38 USC 5301(a)(1). As these benefits cannot be directly or indirectly subjected to legal process, they cannot be “counted” or otherwise used in calculating spousal support or child support in any proceeding in which Appellee seeks to have them included.

Federal law preempts state law in this area. Where federal law preempts state law, Michigan courts have long held that subject matter jurisdiction is lacking, and the court may issue a ruling contrary to the prevailing federal law. Such orders that emanate from such unauthorized rulings may also be attacked as void. This would, of necessity, include the order awarding sanctions against Appellant. His arguments are supported by the plain and unambiguous language of 42 USC 659(h)(1)(B)(iii) and 38 USC 5301, both of which were cited by him and presented as supporting his contention that his disability benefits under the circumstances of his particular case cannot be included in his child support obligations to Appellee. Therefore, his arguments were not frivolous or meritless.

RELIEF REQUESTED

Appellant respectfully requests that this Honorable Court reverse the Circuit Court's ruling that the federal disability pay he receives is not to be counted as income, nor used or otherwise considered in calculating his support obligations to Appellee and reverse the Circuit Court's ruling that Appellee's counsel is entitled to sanctions.

Respectfully submitted,
